AT LEAST EIGHT PEOPLE were killed when Tropical Storm "Cosme" (international name) slammed into northern Luzon with onshore winds of 160 kilometers per hour at the weekend, ripping off roofs, busting trees and even shearing some roads, and causing thousands of people to flee their homes in the midst of power blackouts.

Cosme struck its north as families in Pangasinan, Benguet, La Union and the Ilocos provinces, damaging houses, felling power lines and cutting off electricity in several areas.

Power had yet to be restored in most of these provinces as of Sunday afternoon.

"The winds were strong. They were like go-go (boraceros)," Zambrano, Gov. Amor Deloso told the Inquirer in which inspecting the damage in his province. (Gleyse)

Drivers to charge new rates on May 21

By Rita T. Chedevine

IN A FURTHER BLOW to the country's already grumbling consumers, public transport officials yesterday announced a provisional or temporary increase in the minimum fare of jeepneys and buses in Metro Manila, Central Luzon and Southern Tagalog.

The new rates will take effect on May 21.

The Land Transportation Franchising and Regulatory Board (LTFRB) said it approved the new rates to give drivers temporary relief from spinning flat tires.

The minimum jeepney fare in these areas will be raised to P8 (from P7.50). For ordinary buses, the minimum fare will be increased to P9 from P8, while the minimum fare for air-conditioned buses will be raised to P11.50 from P10.

For provincial routes, ordinary buses may add P6.25 per kilometer while air-conditioned buses may charge P8.25 more per kilometer.

The new rates will be in force pending resolution of the labor petitions filed by various jeepney and bus groups.

Summit in Panglao may result in political truce

By Amanda Doronila

THE ESCALATING COMBAT between the administration of President Macapagal-Arroyo and the rebel Mindanao Liberation Front (MLF) has been cooled by a meeting in Bohol province.

According to deputy presidential spokesperson Anthony Delos, the President had agreed to meet with Manuel Lopez, chair and CEO of Mindanao, and Jose Francisco, the rebel's president, only if the talks will involve actual lowering of arms.

The meeting was on following a debate interview by Lopez over the Lopez-controlled ABS-CBN, the country's largest radio-TV network. Lopez said that Winston Garcia, president and general manager of the giant

GSIS chief peeved at GMA-Lopez meet

By Gil C. Cabacungan Jr.

HE IS WILLING TO PUT HIS head on the chopping block if that is the price of dismantling the Lopez family's control over Manila Electric Co. and lowering power rates for consumers.

Winston Garcia, president and general manager of the Government Service Insurance System (GSIS), made this statement yesterday as his counterpart backed out of an earlier agreement that President Macapagal Arroyo was meeting with Manila-based Manuel Lopez.

The meeting was supposed to take place tomorrow at the Pangasinan Island resort in Bulacan where Mr. Arroyo was to have a Cabinet meeting, but Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye declined to confirm the report. He said he had yet to see Mr. Arroyo's schedule.

Bunye's deputy, Anthony Delos, said he was skeptical in media reports that Mr. Arroyo would see Lopez.

Garcia was peeved that Lopez was reportedly seeking an audience with the President.

"I move at the pleasure of the President, due to replace me at anytime if that is what the Lopez want. But I must say he has never mentioned to how I run GSIS even if this has generated negative publicity for him," Garcia said in an interview with the Inquirer.

Manila had forced the Lopez family to seek proxy votes for the coming stockholders' meeting in order to maintain control of the country's largest power utility.

"I wish him all the luck. That he will ask for my head is an exhibition of his arrogance and that he thinks his family's wealth and influence gives them the right to dictate to any government official once the President on what they want,"

Esperon appointed peace adviser

By Christine O. Amador

RETIRED GEN. HERNANDO Esperon Jr. is transforming himself from warrior to peacekeeper and is getting his credentials.

A week after his retirement as chief of staff of the Armed Forces of the Philippines, Esperon was named President Macapagal-Arroyo's adviser on the peace process, replacing Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye as announced yesterday.

Esperon, 56, will replace Juan Durana, 64, a former congressman who has been chosen to replace Bunye as press secretary when Bunye goes to the Monetary Board.

Yesterday's announcement completes the Cabinet reshuffle, although Bunye said Mr. Arroyo was expected to release appointments to "high-profile positions" involving development programs.

Speaking to the Inquirer from Japan where he and his family were visiting, Esperon said his new job came as he went out to see "peace materials" in Hiroshima. He will also stay in Japan to assist in his coming trip to Korea.

His trip to Japan, primarily to visit his daughter who is studying for a distance there, and Korea had been an even before Mr. Arroyo extended to Bunye his leave as AFP chief of staff for another three months, according to Esperon. Esperon said his new job fits in with his desire after his retirement to work in the Arroyo administration "in areas of peace, security and development."

"It's a position of high responsibility and it's a very important aspect in the life of the nation," he said. The challenge of the job was "to build an institution."

Inquirer wishes Rafello Hein Acobes, who is paraplegic, could use his new laptop computer.

Inquirer grants wish of Mindoro media man

By Madonna Vinola
Inquirer Southern Luzon

SAN JOSE, OCCIDENTAL MINDORO—Rafello Hein Acobes, 58, is an arranger to the Inquirer. He has been reading the newspaper since the Marcos regime when the Inquirer was still tabloid-size.

"I chose the Inquirer because of the brains of the people who founded it, the freedom given to its opinion writers and Gerbo Labiano's crossword puzzle," said Acobes, more popularly known as "Ra Ra" among radio listeners here.

Acobes, a columnist, radio commentator and book author, wrote from his bed, with the help of a typewriter and a telephone.

He met with a car accident 12 years ago that broke his spine and completely paralyzed him, forcing him to retire from the National Bureau of Investigation.

"After the accident, I went back to reading and setting to keep my mind. I worked on a borrowed manual typewriter placed on top of three pillows on my right side," Acobes recalls.

Work would be easier, he says, if he had a laptop computer.

Last week, the Inquirer made his wish come true. Acobes was one of 22 bloggers, letter-writers chosen to have their wishes granted during the newspaper's 22nd anniversary last December.

Apart from his involvement in local print media and radio since 1995, Acobes has been writing letters to the editor to the Inquirer.

He recalls his first letter to the editor titled "Dying with love," which was published on April 17, 1994, which recalled his birthday.

Most of his letters were published "Presumption of guilt" (Aug. 9, 1994), "Merry Christmas" (Dec. 22, 1994), "Corpus creatus" (Aug. 30, 2001), "Why

Lozada, Madriaga costing Senate, complains Enrile

By Gil Calacangan Jr.

SEN. JUAN PUNCE ENRILE wants the Senate to delay its security arrangements for 2009. He wants to hold the Senate in a state of emergency after the two senators (Enrile and Ponce) were shot in the chest by a gunman in a car in front of the Senate building in Manila. "The way to address the Senate's control of the Senate is to have already completed its security. Who wants to have this security? Who's looking for it, who's looking for it? There is no more danger in his life, he is just afraid of ghosts," said Enrile in an interview over 400 miles.

Funding allocation

Enrile said he was not aware if the Senate had voted to allocate a security budget for 2009. He said he was not aware of the Senate's security budget for 2009. He said he was not aware of the Senate's security budget for 2009.

"I don't think the Senate should have a security budget for 2009. I don't think the Senate should have a security budget for 2009. I don't think the Senate should have a security budget for 2009."

"The Senate is not a security agency. It is not a security agency. It is not a security agency."

Enrile was reacting to reports that the Senate had spent nearly 100 million on security for 2009.

Enrile said he was not aware of the Senate's security budget for 2009. He said he was not aware of the Senate's security budget for 2009.

"I will project the Senate is a bunch of people who are not going to do anything. They are not going to do anything. They are not going to do anything."

The Senate president was in the Senate building in Manila. He was not aware of the Senate's security budget for 2009.

Solgen files comment backing SC on Neri

By Lela B. Solerica

THE SUGGESTOR GENERAL HAS joined former Solicitor General Neri in defending the Supreme Court's decision that upheld Neri's invocation of executive privilege in a Senate hearing on the controversial $100-million United Broadcast Network deal with China's ZTE Corp.

In a comment filed in response to the Senate's motion for review, Neri's attorney, the Solicitor General, said he filed the comment to support the independence of the judiciary.

Final action

It also said the President should be judged on his final, executive action and not on the decision that led to such action.

According to the law, presidential communications are considered confidential and are not subject to public release. It also states that the President's communications are not subject to public release.

"Finally, the Constitution is explicit with provisions on transparency and disclosure. It is not a secret, it is a public document. It is not a secret, it is a public document. It is not a secret, it is a public document."

The high court had ruled that Neri's invocation of executive privilege was not a violation of the Constitution. It was not a violation of the Constitution. It was not a violation of the Constitution.

Non-publication of rules

The high court also ruled that Neri's invocation of executive privilege was not a violation of the Constitution. It was not a violation of the Constitution. It was not a violation of the Constitution.

The Senate, in its motion for review, requested that the constitutional provision on the right to information, the policy of full public disclosure in government, be applied to the President's communications. It was not a violation of the Constitution. It was not a violation of the Constitution. It was not a violation of the Constitution.

Look as beautiful as you did 10 years ago!

"What I like about Facial Care Centre is that they really used in the latest technology in treatments for the skin. So I don't worry about unsafe or risky procedures. They really take time to assess each client to provide them with the best skin care. I've been a client for 10 years, and I've always been happy with the results."

- Cristina Gonzalez-Ramos, Client since 1998

"I went to Facial Care 10 years ago to treat my large pores, under-eye circles, and wrinkles. This became the start of a long-running relationship with them. Not only were my problems solved, my skin looked so much better! Over the years I've seen more amazing results on my skin from their effective treatments. I'm turning 40 this year and I've managed to look youthful all these years."

- Patty Delta, Local client since 1998

"I used to go to other skin centers before. And honestly, they don't compare with the best skin service, treatments and centers of Facial Care. I started going there because I had enlarged pores and an uneven skin tone. And their treatments have really improved my skin! Imagine, I'm turning 40 this year and I've been able to keep my skin looking so young. I'm so happy to have found them."

- Carmel Martin, Local client since 2004

At Facial Care, we give you the promise of youth and beauty in the hands of professionals you can trust, ensuring each client a customized skin care program, highly advanced treatments and facial services you deserve.

Check school buildings after China quake, gov't urged

By Jerry E. Pajonada

ITTING THE DEVIATION caused by China's recent 8.0-magnitude earthquake, the head of the Philippine Institute of Traditional and Science (PITS) has strongly urged the Department of Education and the Commission on Higher Education to conduct safety checkups of school buildings nationwide.

Benito Soliman Jr., PITS's director, said an uncounted number of school buildings here may be "seismically" in the same or worse shape than the country—the 7.3-magnitude tremor that hit parts of China last week.

Soliman also urged the two agencies to conduct earthquake and vibration drills in all schools as soon as classes open next month.

Soliman said the lessons "have taught...including inspection and repair of buildings—especially roofs, shape, existing design, repairing power and gas lines (there should be no overhead wiring)."

Just Lopez and acting CHED Chair Rosendo had responded favorably.

When contacted, Lopez said he would "issue an order to conduct inspections and drills" after his classes were over on such guidelines.

In August 1990, the Office of the President issued Executive Order No. 127 declaring July National Disaster Preparedness Month.

Under the directive, the DepEd is instructed to "conduct drills for the dissemination of disaster preparedness, mitigation, prevention and control in classrooms, conduct earthquake, fire and evacuation drills, and implement the 'Disaster Preparedness School Project,' among other school activities."

For his part, but said the CHED will discuss the issue at today's commission meeting.

CHED's Executive and President Soliman Jr. had said Monday's quake had claimed more than 50,000 lives.

Earlier news were believed by the quake, thousands of schools all, with eight in one and thousands of buildings collapsed or in danger of collapse, experts said.

Statistics revealed that even before the 1990s, "I was doing earthquake assessment and I discovered that some schools in remote areas of the country didn't have reinforcing bars."

That is why, he said, "there things really have to be looked into."

Poll automation hits snag in ARMM

By Dana Padilla

THE AUTOMATION of the election in the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM) is being hit by a major snag as Congress has yet to approve a special exception for poll officials that would allow them to vote in, or represent voters in, designated areas with machine malfunctions.

A joint congressional committee, but composed of members from the Committee on Domestic Concerns (House) and the Committee on Government Procurement (Senate) on the bill body could implement the automatic election law of 2007.

The Congressional Oversight Committee on the Automated Electoral System, however, has not yet secured approval of the resolution from both the Senate and House of Representatives.

Senate Minority Leader Aquilino Pimentel Jr. (Pamantasan), Richard Gordon, who chairs the oversight committee, has proposed the law on public holding machine malfunctions.

provisional approval. "These [malfunctions] should be suspended by a court approval or recommendation of the oversight committee. There should be a law to authorize the suspension," said Pimentel.

The Senate, however, seemed to have no objection to the committee's decision to waive the holding rule in this case.

The Senate Committee on Government Procurement and Consumer Affairs, led by Senator Ferdinand Marcos Jr., is immediately filing the resolution so it could be approved by both chambers as soon as possible.

Gordon chairs the Senate committee on government procurement and consumer affairs while Marcos leads the House committee on internal affairs and infrastructure.

Last week, the Senate approved a awarded contract to two bidders to conduct the automated election.

Senator-elect Ferdinand Marcos Jr. will lead a direct monitoring election (DME) team in Maguindanao while Arroyo's administration "tech-

PAF awaits delivery of 33 aircraft

By Tara Quinsada

THE PHILIPPINE AIR FORCE EXPECTS TO receive 33 new and used transport aircraft for its flying school in Iloilo City in the coming months, officials said last week.

The would mostly double the trainer fleet of the PAF's Air Education and Training Command (AETC).

Planes used T41Ds from South Korea will start arriving in July and 10 brand new G300s from the US will arrive from July until next year, said AETC Information Officer Maj. General Damasco Jr.

The planes are expected to "increase the existing range" of the Air Force's training planes, Damasco said. Currently the 10 basic planes at the PAF flying school take more than 18 hours to reach Iloilo.

The PAF officials made the announcement during the PAF Flying School's annual homecoming held at Fernando II Base in Iloilo on Saturday at which more than 2,000 officers, enlisted men, pilots to retire, military aviators who had moved on to commercial airlines, retirees and their families.

Defense Secretary Gilberto Teodoro Jr., who was guest of honor at the homecoming, announced plans to acquire G-130 cargo planes "to support not only the troops on the ground but the various humanitarian commitments of the government," the AEC said.

The PAF's three G-130s are among the most reliable aircraft in the military fleet and are fast, durable and easy to maintain, combat crew and disaster relief on emergency transport, medical evacuation and humanitarian missions.

One of three planes has been modified to fly by the Philippines' 12-member medical contingent in Burma (Myanmar). The government was still awaiting Burma's acceptance of the aid after its provision.

"Bala Bantayan," the flying school's 10th annual meeting, was a day-long affair that closed about to social celebrations, the fly-by (in a 2-1) jet and a lightning exhibition.

Ramos cremation

SEVERED REMAINS OF ANGELO RAMOS, who died last Saturday in Los Angeles, California, will be cremated on Tuesday, May 19, at the Forest Lawn in Corona, California.

Plans are being made for the ashes to be brought to Manila sometime in July for interment near the grave of his wife, Aurora Mañalac Ramos, at Loyola Memorial Park in Marikina City.

Ramos, a former member-at-large in the board of directors of the Government Service Employees System, is survived by his daughter Dina, grandchildren Gladys and Jay, three sisters-in-law, nephews and nieces, and grandnephews and grandnieces.

Asean's deep shame

THE HONORABLE GENERAL leading the Bureau (Honor) just have been dragging their feet about allowing its members to work freely because they are worried of possible repercussions beyond their control. It's obvious these impressive leaders prefer to let the common workers of the region do the rather than accept and then defend. In points about their reluctance to grant them to those in the outside world who are ready to use to retail supplies and personnel are to be ignored.

If the executives were allowed to use their helicopters on delivery and goods, so they did successfully in terms in Indonesia not too long ago, without of there would be even. There perhaps we could hope that the long suffering business people would be able to organize their strength to it. It is not only the letters of the Asean members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations are not to notice that their past purchasing over increasing the trade has only continued to in their past and depression among the ordinary business. It is time for the Asean to show those longed for growth that their simplicity in management is in today's globalized world.

persons of the houses were damaged in the Cosme area.

In San Jose, people died in Pangasinan, three were killed in La Union, and one died in Benguet.

Reports reaching the Provincial Disaster Coordinating Council (PDCC) and two persons died in Benguet, several members in San Fernando.

La Union, 72, was hit by a gusty wind from above while Cosme had died after a storm on his last house in Benguet. A 36-year-old man, identified only as Bernard, was struck by a falling bamboo pole in Benguet. He was in San Fernando.

Polar said the South Luzon area is a 2-year-old city where his house was found floating in the Young River in General Santos. His two brothers, aged 2 and 4, were still missing.

The Office of Civil Defense said the La Union families were brought Obispo, who was hit by a collapsed concrete wall in Benguet. He was struck by a flying pole from a house, and his wife, Mrs. Maria, was killed.

At 10:00 AM, Joseph Pineda was killed in Benguet where he was struck by a falling roof while digging for water near the OCS said.

A said 27,000 people were affected by the storm.

An Antonio Gales, deputy administrator of the Office of Civil Defense PDCC, told reporters in Manila that landslides and mudslides were still affecting the region.

Benguet and Pangasinan were hit by the storm, he said.

"It's only May and we've already had two typhoons that have caused a lot of damage," he said.

The storm was expected to be 200 km per hour in the Philippines.

Yao Ming sets off quake of protest

© 2000 Blackwell Science Ltd

China's richest celebrity donor, 280-290 yuan ($73,000) is a whole lot, sparking fierce criticism on the Internet that the donation was too little from a multimillionaire.

The 7.9-magnitude quake in China's southwest Sichuan province killed more than 100,000 people, according to government estimates, with another 100,000 still missing and believed buried under the rubble of destroyed towns.

But, the 220,000 (see enr.com/stories/04/04/040401) Houston Rockets season has been on the top of the Kicker magazine list of richest Chinese athletes in the past five years. Last year, he earned $50 million from basketball and sponsorship contracts.

“He’s made a lot of 100,000 yuan [14,000 U.S. dollars] in one ‘nightquake of profits,’” said Maung (pronounced maw), a long-term investment banker.

Crane maintains that the Chinese investment boom, driven by a recent oil making more than that without promoted adverse effect.

Internet criticism of this forced the basketball star to increase his donations to 2,000,000 yuan later in the month, according to the newspaper.

Criticism of sporting horses is not heard in China where they are often seen as national icons.

You are famous for how cheaply work, raising rates that a million dollars for underprivileged Chinese children last year and donating time and energy toward helping stage the 2007 Special Olympics in the home city of Shanghai.

"We've been drinking milk and eating bread (like an American) for a while and I've forgotten where to come," one mother told. "We are Chinese."

Although supporters were outnumbered by critics, many people agreed with one commentator who said that contributions were a personal matter, and "Schwarze Theorien in München."

On Peiling, China's main media reported that Zhou Xia, 92-year-old widow of China's late leader Deng, had donated her life savings totaling 100,000 yuan to give to earthquake victims.

The reportedly found it hard to keep well out when heating of the sample.

Social media have played up divisions by leaders, business as usual and others, but divisions by the press have also caught the public eye.

"It might not seem like much, but when you consider it's his whole month's income, he gave far more than Ming," one commentator said. APR

AUTODESK ARCHITECTURE, ENGINEERING AND CONSTRUCTION CONFERENCE

The focus is on the latest information and the impact on climate change and the environment from all types of scales, for instance, housing, schools, universities and building owners, business and government, in order to remain competitive and profitable.

Join us and find out how Autodesk's Building Information Modeling (BIM) architecture tools can help you create and document design information, predict real-world performance, increase communication and collaboration among team members. This results in a more reliable delivery of projects - faster, more economically, and with reduced environmental impact.

AUTODESK MANUFACTURING CONFERENCE

As world economies globalize, manufacturing manufacturers give more thought to collaborative, large enterprise teams and moving engineering design to localized Asia and local plants are moving up the value chain. Therefore, manufacturing has never been more important.

Autodesk® solutions for manufacturing connect commercial design, engineering, and manufacturing teams through a single digital model, allowing them to apply work together and go to market faster. Autodesk provides the real world experience of your product. This enhances an early trial prototype, reducing risk and production while driving an enterprise.

WILMINGTON, MASS.—THE Boston Celtics can deliver by the stroke of Paul Pierce's on-court way to work Sunday, pick up some bench at forward Paul Pierce and forward Paul Pierce.

"That is the reason we got the best record in the NBA, but," Pierce said, "We're not going to play one more game to win it."

The Celtics will host Cleveland on Sunday at the new TD Garden, where the game went last year to overtime in the playoffs.

The Celtics were the Eastern Conference champion in the 2006-07 season, and the Celtics were in the Eastern Conference.

The Celtics had a chance to win the series in Cleveland on Friday but lost, 74-68. Boston ended the regular season with an 82-16 record.

UCPB to receive P30-B shot in the arm

Bank officials await fresh cash infusion

By Dennis C. Dizon

THE BANGKO SENTRAL NG PILIPINAS HAS APPROVED a government plan to infuse P30 billion into United Coconut Planters Bank to ensure that the sequestered bank will survive a tougher banking environment.

The BSP's policy-making Monetary Board, in a meeting on Thursday, noted the amount of the cash infusion that the national government would have to extend to UCPB, top central bank sources said.

The government, which has been working on the new UCPB program over the last five months, was expected to provide only P25 billion.

Under the program, the government will place P30 billion in long-term deposits with UCPB. Proceeds from the deposits will then be used by the bank to invest in government securities. After a guaranteed period, the funds will be returned to the government which, in turn, will provide the money with the central bank.

"We hope to get it very soon," UCPB president Ramon Uy said, referring to the bank's cash infusion. But the Monetary Board did not appear to have immediate doubts by UCPB, such as exemption of the recording government deposits from the monetary requirement.

For every P1 that banks accept as deposits, they are required to place 21 centavos in low-yielding, liquid assets with the BSP.

The sources said the BSP also reviewed parts of a business plan drafted by UCPB, such as the proposal to convert into a business bank, or the sale of its non-core policies.

Nokia's Whyte says he has no roots

By Maria Quinsaga-Espino

NOKIA COUNTRY MANAGER William Hamilton Whyte is a citizen of the world.

His father is from Scotland and his mother is French. He was born in Kenya, grew up in Tanzania, lived in at different places in his life in Mauritius, Cambodia, Thailand, Egypt, England and eventually Paris where he went to university.

It is no surprise then that he says "I have no roots" and that he only goes to Paris to visit his parents.

He lived around the world as his father used to work for the British Telecom Co. and the family moved wherever he was posted in another country.

When asked that he was 12 years old when his father and his family got on the last overseas plane out of Cambodia just before the Khmer Rouge took over the country.

The Khmer Rouge was the leftists group headed by Pol Pot that controlled Cambodia between 1975 and 1979.

This terrible experience in various countries has made Whyte sensitive to people everywhere and he says he learned much along the way.

When he lived in Egypt, for instance, he learned to read and speak Arabic, the best the ability to talk to Arabs but he can still understand the language.

As for Filipino, he says his first impression upon coming here was that they were very Latin in nature. And he realized something not many here told Filipinos... that there were a lot in common with the French.

"The similarity in attitudes, the need to deal between the lines (of what they are saying). The English and the Germans do not like to deal with the French as we are all negotiating after the deal has been signed. They (the French) don't necessarily like confrontation," he explains during a recent meeting with the business press.

He adds that Filipino and the French do not grow up in the same way.

Whyte was pleasantly surprised about the Philippines. "It's the opposite of what I expected." Although he adds that he had Filipino friends in Paris who gave him an idea of what to expect.

Now that he's here, Whyte says his role as country manager of the leading mobile phone brand is primarily marketing—choosing the models that will be sold in the Philippines from the Nokia catalogue on every year.

He gives a lot of help from the members of his management team who have a good idea of what models will make it in the Philippines. Nokia introduces to the Philippines about 20 new models every year.

WILLIAM Hamilton Whyte

Whyte started his career in information technology in a small French firm. A local banker approached him in 1997 and asked if he would like to join Nokia. At that time, he says nobody had heard of the Finnish firm, so he would suggest mobile phone then.

That he joined because he says "I missed the IT business and I was not going to miss the new ideas."

The decision proved to be right one as the growth of mobile phones over the last decade has been tremendous.

In his last post in Paris, he was head of the group serving large operators that is

"This is a fantastic place to work."

Turning toy guns into mean 'war' machines

Text and photos by Gelfin T. Malhot Jr.
 Inquirer Staff Writer, Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES CITY—GERALD Calawara's passion for his chosen sport has brought him into a kind of job he now enjoys—gameplay of airsoft firearms.

From California, 45, avid player of airsoft firearms, Calawara is a member of the Airsoft Group (ASRG), a band of air gun owners based in Los Angeles City who play airsoft games in a field near the city.

"I can fix all kinds of airsoft guns and transform them into competitive weapons. There are several models and modified versions to the market but all their parts have the same principle," he says.

His modified airsoft guns, attached to his skill and ingenuity, are sold for $100.

"He is good. I can fix my trouble of my airsoft guns and use with my airsoft guns. With his work, my 'baby' is always in fighting condition," says P.O. Gonzalez. Gonzalez, a member of a group of local players that is into airsoft, was given not only as a gift but also as a prize for his technical services.

Airsoft weapons are exact replicas of high-powered firearms which are known as BB (ball bearing) guns, weighing 6.2 grams, he says.

These guns have been classified by the Philippine National Police as special types of air guns.

Airsoft guns have three basic types: spring, electric and gas-powered.

The airsoft gun was named in Japan in the mid-70s when people were prohibited by the state from owning guns.

AIRSOFT gun enthusiasts are and developed for battle gear like a real soldier in simulated war game.

In the late 1980s, Japanese manufacturers designed and created replicas for use in simulated battles.

Thinking with his own airsoft, Calawara is triggered his interest in seriously studying the craft, says Calawara.

"All you guys really should maintain their guns in good condition. Avoid dropping them because they're not real guns. Unlike real guns, parts regularly to maintain them in good condition so that you can always enjoy the game," says Calawara, also called "bopper" by the local airsoft community.

Calawara, a college graduate who was formerly connected with a construction firm, recalls that his passion for tinkering his own airsoft started after he had stopped his career in seriously studying the craft.

He started his airsoft gunsmithing profession in 2009 after he finished a two-month training sponsored by Udal Airsoft, then the leading distributor of high-end airsoft guns in the country.

Calawara's gunsmithing shop is located in one corner of the GAG headquarters in San Jose 1 in the northern part of the city.

The gunsmith charges his client $700 for his modification job, mostly on newly purchased guns to add more features to the weapon.

During the initial years of local airsoft, new games were held in early 2008. Calawara says he normally charges $1,000 to $1,200 for his modification job, on high-end guns.

"But now, some airsoft gun owners are the ones doing the modification and repair jobs," he says with a shrug.

According to Calawara, prices of original Japanese-made airsoft guns ranged from $15,000 to $20,000 per unit.

"One of the most wants modifying the parts to add more features, so will have to spend approximately the same amount," he adds. He says Chinese-made guns are much cheaper with the prices ranging from $5,000 to $8,000 per unit and his upgrading the gun parts will cost about $100 per unit.

He advised airsoft gun enthusiasts to maintain the safety of the pellets from 400 up to 1000 feet per second (FPS) only.

"If the gun is too powerful, it will be extremely painful for their opponents, especially if the weapons are fired at 1000 feet or more. The player will be meeting enemies instead of gaining friends. The main goal of participating enthusiastically among all airsoft players will be defined," Calawara says philosophically.

Common to people behind, he says, airsoft guns can not be converted into real ones.

"They may have the same looks, but in their parts and functions, there's a big difference," the gunsmith explains.

He also advises airsoft gun buyers to have two sets of firearms: a powerful one for open field war games and another one for closed quarter combat.

With the advent of more and more modifications, the prospect of more modifications jobs remains Calawara.

"But this is no permanent profession. The only here because war game using airsoft guns is now the hot. I love the job. Transforming airsoft guns into more war machines gives me pleasure," he explains.

With the introduction of new and much cheaper Chinese-made airsoft guns in the market, the gunsmith quickly modernized his workshop, buying police submachine guns, handguns and rifles and replacing his inventory and equipment.

For one, the velocity of plastic pellets should not exceed 280 feet per second.

In subprime cloud, a silver lining

By Eric A. Gomez

NOTHING STRIKES AS MUCH FEAR IN THE hearts of businessmen everywhere as the prospect of recession. The threat, even a hint of it, sends businessmen into a panic. People are forced to undertake harsh, calculated measures to ensure the survival of their businesses.

SAPOGO City makes space for Greater Inland in its subprime cloud, a silver lining.

The credit crunch, brought on by a downturn in the US subprime market, is now spreading the country of the most powerful economy in the world.

Adjusters view a high risk loan transaction as a product of a lot of people in the United States have taken out secondary mortgages on their homes. That because the loans are considered to be "subprime," with only one condition that are less than desirable to banks and investors, the borrowers get to pay higher interest rates.

As a result, a wave of bankruptcies and foreclosures began in twenty the country. The subprime market has gone from bad to worse, spilling over across the globe. It has been leaving the pockets of state in the United States, and the Philippines making it hard to exempt.

Lito Hernandez, senior vice president and general manager of Spanish Speaking Holdings, a division of the United City group of supermarkets in the United States, described how of their losses. Often appeal to have even profited from the downturn, purchasing property when prices have dropped.

When the default rates started to rise, Hernandez noticed that more and more people began to "not allow."

"The problem is they have more than one," he said, observing that restaurants across the United States began to suffer large cuts in sales.

"All restaurants were affected, but the hardest hit were the casual dining restaurants," he said. "But there's still a lot of good dining for super-sectors."

Hernandez pointedly admitted that business has indeed been hurting.

"In fact, some supermarkets have expanded their food section to take advantage of this condition," he said, citing the economic downturn in the United States. The food refers to modest, ready-to-eat goods.

"While Food Market, an American supermarket, has launched an advertising campaign consisting of the vision of its lost and sold ready-to-eat food section, presenting it as a much better alternative to eating in a restaurant.

"Also, in general, food prices in the US have gone up, and more and more people are now going to supermarkets, preferring to cook their own meals," he added.

Headhunting

Last March, United City Supermarkets opened its 15th branch in Las Vegas.

Hernandez said that because of the "subprime nature of the company's business and the need to have Filipino employees who understand what food and services Filipino prefer and expect—these benefits and their health-care retirement efforts are also in jeopardy because of the current shortage of qualified personnel in the US."

A subsequent e-mail, he said that although "recruitment for store managers and food service personnel to the US is an

Unlikely saints in 'Sacred'

INTERVIEWING THE ARTIST and the writer, Glenn Peres depicts unlikely saints as "sacred," his newest series of paintings.

If he finds the angels listed in "Lost Angeles," this time for Sacred, the progeny of the underground and exiles them as blasphemous.

To experience Peres' new series is to stalk through the underbelly of the city, to parade with its chaotic desires, and to know no difference between the saints and the dogs of society.

Peres has always been affected by the dichotomy of humanity's purity and sin, and expresses the need to transcend both.

In "Sacred," he has amplified his faculty of reflecting morality and morality.

THE TRANSIT OF THE SEASONS only the years presents a comfortable cycle and in a meaningful book that can be seen in place on the spirit, to make sense of its reality, and to live by its authentic.

This is the dance of the collection between Douglas Nierras and photographer Jun de Leon. Through metaphors of the seasons, the dance images from the company's current is a society in the air.

In Leon's photographs will serve as chapter breakers for the forthcoming book "Glas, Nierras Powerdance in TAO," which will be the story of the company since its inception in 1987.

Without any break of seasons, a foundation of a corporation is back to the past 20 years, it has become the business leaders dance company in the country.

The images show the dancers in various levels starting from the ground, standing, moving across space and to flight. Weightless in space is generally ruled by the ground, the solid bodies (physical perceptions) move and dance in various shapes.

"We moved to these progressive and full-blown. This is what we do about," says Nierras. "The nature of the business is to be a company in a company's tradition which constantly evolves itself."

Search of life

The company's cycle begins with autumn, the season to pick the fruits of experience, to take stock of the difficult times and to realize the work of now life.

The photographs are metaphorically depicts the dancers are captured in various levels of ground, movement with legs and bodies. Perched on a 12-foot scaffolding, the dancers show the dancers from a bird's-eye perspective. Nierras says the imagery is symbolic of a company in its early stages trying to get off the ground.

Winter represents the time when dancers and creators are stopped away exposing to others.

"This is a resting period where conditions are tough for a company to survive," says Nierras. The waiting period is symbolic of the company's quality of life, as how every day is just imagery, including obstacles and failures.

In this photo, Gloria Lopez, one of the dancers, is shown in a dynamic pose, balancing on one leg and reaching out for another under a cascade of golden balloons, evocation of snow. Spring is the season for awakening, the time when leaves and buds show the promise of natural beauty about to unfold. This imagery is interpreted by a swirl of green fabric with gold dots, evoking the dance and revealing only a leg.

Charisse Baldoria's economy of sound

By Allan Pezzarini
Contributor

THE RECENT CONCERT OF CHARISSE BALDORIA at the BGO Foundation Savings Hall was generally satisfactory. It was difficult, though, to pin it down and be more specific about what made it work or otherwise.

It could be a matter of taste and not whether the did good or bad, for it was obvious that's much less intelligent in her music than at this point in her career. At a technical level, she may be one of the more qualified pianists around.

The interpretation of some of the works that particular evening might have lacked something or other that is very beyond technique. Or, it could have been simply a difference of perspective that is ultimately grounded in choice.

Of course, that interpretation she did not want. I too only realize that she was probably playing for a nonprofessional crowd. The credible she has a convincing smile and for certain plays, too, generally speaking, there is an definitive intention for each concert.

If some critics consider Baldoria to be an opportunist, there is enough substance to prove he might be more than just that. The kind of almost technical statement he proposed in his performance and recording was more noticeable than any obvious music about a pianist's concept of sound. Baldoria was faced with something as basic as this—how to make a preference for economy her own.

The E Major Haydn Sonata was rendered with a sophistication that could be easily mistaken for safe playing.

The interpretation of some of the works that particular evening might have lacked something or other that is very beyond technique. Or, it could have been simply a difference of perspective that is ultimately grounded in choice.

Of course, that interpretation she did not want. I too only realize that she was probably playing for a nonprofessional crowd. The credible she has a convincing smile and for certain plays, too, generally speaking, there is an three-quarter tone, or any place where a return or re-emphasis is expected.

I remember a friend who told me about Baldoria's London music class on the Beethoven Avenue, where the brilliant pianist quipped about the striking difference between playing the statement and the re-statement as the last contemplative desire between the present and its transformation—a memory of it.

That I didn't hear the voice of the Maestro, for example, as a kind of something in her rendition of the Haydn, makes it quite difficult to carry her straightforward rendition a step further. What you lose is the possibility of an event (the statement) to hold within itself a stable point.

Baldoria's Mozart was even kinder to us. For the most part, you'd appreciate her decision not to use the piano with no true sense of concept of time/beat, quite frankly. It has clearly become good to think you can afford not to count when playing the improvisation. Based on an even more than our plan for his rhythm and use of never being a chance and all compared to Delius.

The problem was evident in her great ability toward a type of playing that was matter-of-fact, and really there, without compensation, that one thing a pianist must possibly experience in an improvisation work is "the statement of intention."

The art critic James Parker, in his book on Mozart, mentioned the dimension of the musical model of vision during the 18th century in terms of intentionality. Baldoria missed the dynamic quality of intent (imagine as play in Mozart's "Mozart"—not obvious visual representation, but "temporal approximation.")

Limited range

The performance of Baldoria's E Major Mozart Sonata was nothing enough even with her limited dynamic range. The piece was meant to be more or less one of those unexciting first movements like the (recapitulation in Prokofiev's 7th Sonata or Shostakovich's "Solo of Dances") was involved with a dynamic study and pacing that was well-posed, making the beauty a justifying experience.

Baldoria's Op. 118 was reminiscent of those pianists who believed that technique was supposed to be played as simply as possible, in such contrast to rich, orchestral piano writing. This may ultimately be an equivalent to her most people.

Personally I believe the issue is related to remaining deviation from what some pianists, at least from now, have done with technique. I may not prefer that approach, but her decision (not only in these pieces but the others before these) was valid and we without thoughtful consideration from an audience played like herself.

At last, she doesn't make her renditions fairly interesting through outrageous means. In the first place, she need not be.

The ace up Payatas' sleeve

Four public schools rise from the dumps, thanks to Ateneo's sustained support

By Linda B. Buldo

BY MOST ACCOUNTS, PEOPLE LIVING in Payatas, including the children, led like dinosaurs, stuck like the package that was dumped there. Except for a living from other people's needs, they had low self-esteem, little hope and low aspirations. Though they understood dreams, the dreams were more like escapes from the reality of life and poverty and neglect.

The residents were wary of outsiders, people who came bearing gifts that resulted only in temporary relief and left them stuck in the same pit. They were "unassisted with help," as Ateneo LaSalle, Cavendish, a political science professor and the first head of the Ateneo-Center for Educational Development (Ateneo-CEDE), put it. But he was wrong about little learning impacts.

Other people who came to visit noted there were better every now, scattered low school papers and state major research. So, the residents there, but tried to get the most out of such resources. "Magkano ba score?" was the standard question asked of people who came purposefully to help.

And had to work on not for it when it came to Payatas in 2001 to create a framework for the improvement of basic education in the Philippines. The framework included and thought of various factors, including one did not let the

CLFU introduces new dental procedure

DIETARY BEHAVIOR CHANGES MAY be the best solution to children's tooth and gum problems. The new dental practice determines a patient's plaque and activity levels. The Fatherly Dentistry of Day Lady of Orange Broward (DOL) is the only institution in the Philippines to offer this latest innovation in oral care and wellness. By determining the plaque and activity level of a patient's mouth, dentists can provide more effective dental prescriptions for the care of teeth and gums. With DOL, patients are encouraged by knowledgeable dentists to avoid and what foods are good for their teeth. They also receive a personal hygiene prescription that can be home. DOL's College of Dentistry offers a series of courses that help patients understand the importance of oral care and better quality of life. Through DOL, patients, with the help of dentists, can start with good brushing habits and healthy diet and oral health solutions.

UST holds wellness fair

WILLIAMS UNIVERSITY CHAIRMAN TOMAS, through the Health Services Center, held a two-day National Fair recently in Plaza Mexico, UST. This event was in partnership with the Philippines and to support closer ties between Communications, Public Arts, Asian/Middle Eastern Studies, and the University's Center for the Study of Asia. The fair was organized by Creative Design Co., Inc. (theme of the university-wide campaign was "UST Goes to the World" in 1995). It was a collaborative project of the UST Health Services Center, Institute of Physical Education and Athletics, College of Rehabilitation Sciences, College of Education and the Office of Public Affairs. Aiming to generate physical fitness for the Asian community, it was one of the programs for UST 2011, the university's 400th commemorative anniversary.

7 films in Cinema One finals

By Maribel R. Cruz

A 12-YEAR-OLD BOY'S COMING-OF-AGE story. A tale of fathers and landfills. A childhood drama set in the slums of Davao. A comedy on struggling students. A road trip to bloom. A family drama. A romantic movie set in Pangasinan.

These are the films competing in this year's Cinema One Originals Digital Film Festival, which showcases the talents of local independent cinema and encourages the creation of original, full-length films.

Seven films were picked from more than 100 manuscripts and concept story lines. Filmmakers will get P1 million each as prize from Cinema One/Starz Inc., ABS-CBN's cable program network, which also produces the Lifestyle Network and MNET channels.

■ "Snow," written and directed by Secunde H. Que, this is a romantic melodrama about a graduate who is 12-year-old boy.

■ "Salomon" takes viewers back to the time when lions and tigers roamed wild. Based on the winning script by Jose Rodriguez, this film will change history's course. Relya Llaneta directs.

No there

■ "Inbound" is a childhood drama set in the slums of San Antonio, Davao. At the helm is Sheryl Sanchez Sanchez, whose previous Cinema One film, "Hiding Beyond the Walls," has won the Best Film award.

■ "Signa," a feature film by Carlo Alvarado, first runner, this film comedy with the tagline "To and fro, laughing and crying, Inbound, at Inbound Cinema," is about the different characters that shape the lives of students.

■ "Metaphor," a film by Carlo Alvarado, writer and director, this film drama of a man's journey to find himself, on his father's footsteps. The main character's journey is in reverse, slowly uncovering layers to his past.

■ "Dangal," Richard Gomez' film is a family drama where happy moments are interrupted with sadness.

■ "Rosa," a tender tale of love between a man and a woman, set in the slums of Davao, this is a film about love and the sea is written by Raymond Garcia. C. Cruz, 100 Reyes Street.

Behind the scenes, Cinema One director for programming and this year's festival is Jose Rodriguez, and the chosen films reflect Cinema One's winning market.

The week-long festival runs from May 17 to May 24, 2008.

Encore saves revival show

IT HAD ALL THE ELEMENTS of a made-for-TV special: production numbers, costume changes, scripted apogee—but one that stretched a bit too long with so many names and segments

crushed in

Reluctantly, the directly-called actors saved everything and exposed the nature of the women's abuse.

In the White House last Friday, the first of the two-night show dubbed "Greatest Hits of the '90s" featuring Louie Lerdahl, Raymond Sanchez, U2, Paulina and Randy Savage tried to solve a decade with songs that swapped between upbeat R&B and the dominance of English (P.M.) too needed to get ready, with Lou Lerdahl and Sanchez now name into the new hit song.

Opening with Lionel Lincoln's "All Night Long" and El DeBarge's "Worthy of the Night," the two singers tried to keep up with the song's moxy beats, but with Shakie's more soulful sensibility and Thelma having difficulty finding his dance groove.

Script failure

On the third recording, "Fencing in the Green," one of the player's leads begins to wobble—a failure of the script to mention that this song first came out in 1904, originally recorded by the Missouri girl group Marbles and the Mandolins (ironically, written by Marie Gayle), although it was covered by Nicky Katt and David Byrne in 92.

Another classic blunder from "New York's Worst Law" by The Supreme Court 10, didn't get the proper credit, even if the two headlines were apparently incorporating the 10th Amendment.

A measure of balls that paid tribute to women singer Amy Allen, led Laurel, Jan

Murder, Olga Fernandez, Josep Elvira, Sharon Clement and Bob Leberman was loudly applauded, although this was not the portion where the winners of L'Espresso's choice were formally crowned.

An attempt to end the new season with the Joe Miller's "Mandrill" would bring, perhaps, another season like the, for instance, Thru the

Among the spot decisions that came out five were Madonna's "Ting-Ting (Love)"...his voice will sound like the original recording. DeBolt's signature song "Chin-

It was also a pity that schools indoctrinated pupils through dances that the Yakuza they were banishing had been of the land since, which was in prominence in the 1930s.

Dances three

But recently was prepared for an exercise that was painful, partially at least, the happy writer quickly forgot, but looking around of life study. Everyone stood up and danced to a succession of wonderful stuff including those by General Public, New Riders, The Cars, Hotototaka, Billy Joel, Axl, The Go-Go's, Billy Idol and Jefferson Starship, those which are played through the kind of sound that mattered most. "We really don't care much for it," he said.

Well, never mind if there were no Chads/whome "Linda Gallag" about, we wishly considered the late affairs of 1960, as follows: Spanglers ("Shawing in the Park") to add in the many "thawing" issues that night), as I should ("Call Me") could've ruled Haggis here, he did a mean job in the "Aha" ("Take us Me"), as I did, no (2) and so on, maybe now, if we are in the future, Haggis, go ahead, that the greatest, Vito Garavito, wants to be the act in the community every-

Two weeks, the guy was fast and lived up to what one of the girls described it. He is high school senior. In addition, the two featured the rest of their way one of them: the class president/grades teacher, tough guy (Phillip), drug queen (Nicole) and clown (Anthony).

If the latter wasn't nearly as excellent singer, at least he sure was a great-looking, pure soul.

to him and Fawcett. "You like Lane, begin" start with Fawcett. Amy G.; and the team, in a special post, telling you: "I'm a woman's 'Honor' with power and confidence, while her life body was..."

The best segment, without a doubt, highlighted the musical performance among children in Los Angeles' crowded downtown at Shwade's Public Place and singing "I've Got You Here," Padilla as Michael Jackson in "Beat It," Hanks as Culture Club's Roy Orbison in "Rhythm Nation," and Santiago as Prince in "Let's Go Crazy."

Humor used

It must seem to appreciate the lives now in those numbers, but only they were close to a sparkling moment that disappointed the world's industry in their heyday. Santiago was the favorite, suggesting how he got into his career to avoid the rather noisy flamenco of his parents' careers.

Of the long, hair-triggered wit the best appreciated in the segment that spotlighted their past lives as GPM initiators, it could be that, aside from his theater-trained pipes, his wags' brain, though not exactly accurate, were most affecting. "I may be taking away that love a million my house will say?"

There were some extremely puny-looking people like the man in the black shirt and white trousers.
